

Working with WRG

WRG works with districts on AI the way it should be done in schools: systems first, no hype, nothing that puts student data where it does not belong. Below is how that work usually starts.

Dr. Steve Troyer. 22 years in public education, 15 in administration and leadership, 5 as superintendent of an Indiana district of about 2,500 students and 450 employees on a budget around $32 million. I left the superintendency in early 2026 to start Willow Run Group and build the tools I wished I had in the job.

How Districts Work With WRG

AI Strategy and Systems Audit

Before anyone builds or buys anything, we map how your team actually works. Cross-team workflow mapping, leadership interviews, a risk and opportunity assessment, and a phased roadmap you can act on. Scoped to district size.

Professional Learning

Half-day and full-day AI sessions built for administrative teams, cabinets, and boards. Practical, grounded, tied to the work you already do.

Leadership Team AI Setup Session

A 90-minute working session with your cabinet that gets your leadership team using AI on real tasks, not watching a demo. Includes the full EdLeaderAI workflow library for your team. District invoice and W-9 provided, Title II eligible.

1-on-1 Leader Coaching

Structured time on a specific operational or AI question. Often a follow-up to an audit.

Custom Builds

When a district needs something that does not exist yet, we build it. FundView, a school finance command center for Indiana districts, and EdLeaderAI, a library of 60 leadership workflows, are both WRG-built and in use. Proof we build real tools, not slideware.

FROM A CURRENT INDIANA SUPERINTENDENT

“Practical, grounded, and no AI hype. I came away with a working approach to meaningfully reduce the burden of recurring tasks that take up significant time in my week.”

Dr. Matt Widenhoefer

Superintendent, MSD Steuben County

Where to start

If any of this is worth a conversation, email me. No sales funnel, no pressure. Tell me what is taking up your week and we will figure out whether there is anything here worth your time.
